Dear Friends,

A few statistics speak volumes to the growing influence of Hispanics in our society: approximately 40 million Hispanics currently represent 13.5% of the nation's population and half of them are under 25 years old. Hispanics already the largest minority group among children, are expected to become the largest minority group overall by next year. This means that a very large number of Hispanics are our future students, workers, taxpayers, and business and political leaders. New data on further growth among the U.S. Hispanic community underscore that the nation's priorities and overall well-being will soon have to reflect the issues that matter to Hispanics and how well the community fares.

The well-being of Hispanic children and families can help us create a strong, prosperous, and fair nation, in which everyone benefits. This prosperity begins with access to a quality education that needs to be complimented with practical and useful workplace experience. Fellowships and internships are great opportunities that can help build leadership and workforce skills absent from a formal college education.

In New York and elsewhere, Hispanics are dramatically underrepresented in policy making positions in government and the corporate sectors. Although the proportion is growing rapidly, only 22% of Hispanics have the opportunity to attend colleges and universities and represent 10% of total enrollment. These are problems that negatively impact the economic stability of our communities. As the majority population ages out of the labor force, Hispanics should have an opportunity to move into these positions, as long as we continue to prepare ourselves for such opportunities. Hispanic elected officials recognize these trends and are preparing to aggressively address this critically important issue.

The pages that follow are filled with important content that represents sources of funding for college and post-graduate education. In addition, important resources for internships and fellowships are provided for those interested in a career in public service, whether it be work in the government or the non-profit sectors. The Assembly Puerto Rican/Hispanic Task Force is proud to be able to provide this important resource.

It is our hope that this guide will help our youth to better connect with the people, communities and educational opportunities that will provide them with increased chances for a successful life. This is a fundamental requirement in a civil society. Opportunity and achievement, unhindered, leads to a more informed citizenry that strengthens communities and enriches our entire nation.

This guide is a tool for empowering lives and communities. On behalf of the Task Force, I hope you find this resource a useful tool that will become part of your family's library of reference materials.

Sincerely,

Peter M. Rivera
Chairman, New York State Assembly Puerto Rican/Hispanic Task Force
March 2005

How To Use This Guide

Please use this 2005-2006 Corporate, Government, and Non-Profit Sector Internship Directory and Scholarship Guide to guide you through your search for volunteer and paid internship/ fellowship opportunities and scholarships that can assist your undergraduate, graduate, or law school education.

The internship directory is broken down by several topics and workforce-sectors. Fellowships and scholarships are separate. Please make sure to pay attention to the last page (page 43) which contains important internet links which are mega-information resources. Any information that cannot be found in this directory will most likely be found on one of those sites.

All internships, fellowships and scholarships require submission of a cover letter and resume.

Many have strict deadlines. Please consider deadlines listed in this directory only as a general guide and check with the program about specific guidelines for the year you are applying as many programs change their requirements regularly.

Written inquiries are suggested versus phone calls. Several programs, especially fellowships and more selective internships and scholarships, require submission of writing samples, or other specific requirements omitted in this directory/guide. Please make sure to begin your inquiry well before deadlines. Your application will most likely NOT be reviewed if received after the deadline.

While this directory/guide will serve as a very useful resource, it is important to note that there is a large volume of information that has not been included due to space considerations. The web sites mentioned above are key to researching more information. Your interest in a specific company or workforce sector can help you narrow your search.
