National Endowment for the Humanities

The National Endowment for the Humanities' (NEH) Humanities Initiatives at Community Colleges are intended to strengthen the teaching and study of the humanities in subjects such as history, philosophy and literature. These grants may be used to enhance existing humanities programs, resources or courses, or to develop new ones. NEH invites projects related to its new initiative, The Common Good: The Humanities in the Public Square. This initiative seeks to connect the study of the humanities to the current conditions of national life. Many of today's challenges require the forms of understanding and knowledge represented by the humanities. They require the broadest possible engagement of scholars and the public with the resources of the humanities, including but not limited to the study of language, literature, history, philosophy, comparative religion and ethics. The study of the humanities can help illuminate the complexity of many contemporary challenges while enriching our understanding of the common good.

- Eligibility: This program accepts applications from community colleges and post-secondary two-year institutions. Any U.S. nonprofit, tax-exempt two-year college is eligible to apply. Individuals are not eligible to apply. Collaboration with other organizations is welcome, but the project director must be from an eligible institution.

The goals of the research program are to improve the quality of life for patients with vasculitis and ultimately find the cause(s) and cure for vasculitis.

Spencer Foundation

The Spencer Foundation is pleased to announce the second round of its grant program to enrich the work of academic midcareer scholars who are seven to 20 years post-doctorate. This targeted program provides support for those who are interested in advancing their understanding of a compelling problem of education by acquiring new skills, substantive knowledge, theoretical perspectives or methodological tools. It is not intended to encourage researchers to abandon their existing area of expertise, but rather to build on, enrich and extend that training with the acquisition of new methodological tools and/or perspectives about a subject to which they have been deeply committed throughout their academic career. In developing this program of additive scholarly learning, the foundation intends to heighten the potential for midcareer productivity and contribution by operationalizing, through its grant-making, an understanding of scholarship that has merit: that reaching beyond familiar ways of thinking about education puzzles and problems has the potential to bring innovative ideas to the work, and by extension, to lines of inquiry in the field.

- Eligibility: Eligible applicants must be faculty members or research scholars who were awarded doctorates within the last seven to 20 years.
- Funding: Proposal budgets may not exceed $150,000.
- Deadline: September 10, 2015
