

Women's History

The fight for equal rights

Dear Friend,

The women's rights movement started over 150 years ago here in New York State. Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony led the way in the fight for women's suffrage, helping women secure the right to vote in 1920 with the passage of the 19th Amendment. Since then, women have fought tirelessly to break down barriers and expand women's rights and their role in society.

However, the fight for equality is not yet over. "Female firsts" and glass ceilings still exist and this must be corrected. Women's equality is not up for debate. That's why I'm calling on the Senate to join the Assembly in passing the full Women's Equality Act – all 10 points.

Let's take time to not only reflect on the accomplishments of women but to also recommit ourselves to achieving true equality for women. To learn more about the Women's Equality Act, visit the Assembly's website or contact my office.

Sincerely,
