SPECIAL HEALTH ADVISORY: New York City Department Of Health and Mental Hygiene Investigating Cluster of Legionnaires' Disease in Section of Lenox Hill

Seven cases of Legionnaires' disease have been reported in the last 11 days. Legionnaires' disease cannot be spread from person to person; those at high risk include people aged 50 or older, especially cigarette smokers, people with chronic lung disease or with weakened immune systems. New Yorkers with respiratory symptoms, such as fever, cough, chills and muscle aches, are urged to promptly seek medical attention.

The Health Department is currently investigating a community cluster of Legionnaires' disease in a section of Lenox Hill in Manhattan. A total of seven individuals have been confirmed with Legionnaires' disease in the last 11 days. Four persons are hospitalized and recovering, two have been discharged from the hospital and one person with significant underlying health conditions in their 90s has died. The Health Department is actively investigating these cases and has sampled and is testing water from all cooling tower systems within a half kilometer radius of this section of Lenox Hill. New Yorkers with respiratory symptoms, such as fever, cough, chills and muscle aches, are urged to promptly seek medical attention. The Health Department has alerted health care providers in the area. Legionnaires' disease is treatable with standard antibiotics used to treat pneumonia. Every year, there are between 200 and 400 cases of Legionnaires' disease in the city.

"I am committed to getting to the bottom of this not only as an Assembly Member but as a member of this community," Assembly Member Seawright said. "We will be holding a community meeting and information session at Lenox Hill Neighborhood House on Monday, June 19th at 6 PM. I will relay further details and any new information on this matter as soon as they are available. Please feel free to contact my office with any questions."

Legionnaires' disease is caused by the bacteria Legionella. Symptoms include fever, cough, chills, muscle aches, headache, fatigue, loss of appetite, confusion and diarrhea. Symptoms usually appear two to 10 days after significant exposure to Legionella bacteria. Most cases of Legionnaires' disease can be traced to plumbing systems where conditions are favorable for Legionella growth, such as cooling towers, whirlpool spas, hot tubs, humidifiers, hot water tanks, and evaporative condensers of large air-conditioning systems.

In response to the Legionnaires' disease outbreaks of 2015, the Mayor and City Council passed Local Law 77 to reduce and contain Legionella growth in cooling towers, becoming the first U.S. municipality to adopt a set of robust requirements to ensure cooling tower maintenance. Changes to the Health Code went into effect in May 2016. In June of last year, the Health Department announced a plan to reduce the risk of Legionnaires' disease outbreaks in the city, which, in addition to implementing the most aggressive cooling tower regulation in the nation, included the hiring of more inspectors and training of City personnel to inspect towers and enhanced capacity to conduct lab testing. Since the implementation of the new law, the Department has identified and monitored over 4,000 cooling tower systems (over 6,100 cooling towers) in New York City.

To promote compliance, the Health Department has been educating building owners and managers in best practices for managing their cooling towers. The agency has distributed information about the Management Program and Plan template, how to build a cooling tower system team and general Frequently Asked Questions.

Two Seawright Bills Pass Assembly and Senate

91st Street Waste Transfer Station Asthma Study

On Wednesday, June 14, 2017, Assembly Member Rebecca Seawright obtained passage of A.7214, legislation requiring the New York State Department of Health to conduct a study on the high incidence of asthma in Manhattan and to prepare a remediation plan. This bill also passed in the Senate and will be delivered to the Governor at an agreed upon date.

"The construction of the 91st Street Waste Transfer Station in our residential community is a looming threat to public health and quality of life for Yorkville residents. Air quality continues to be one of our most important concerns. According to the New York City Department of Health, the community surrounding the 91st Street Marine Transfer Station has disproportionately higher rates of asthma," stated Assembly Member Rebecca A. Seawright. "It is outrageous that there is no plan to date to remediate the ill effects of such a facility. All of the 2015 Manhattan based air pollutant readings were above the city wide average. Due to the higher than average rates of air pollutants found in Manhattan, it is necessary to conduct this study."

In addition to requiring that the study and the plan be conducted within twelve months of the effective date of becoming law, this legislation requires that the results of the remedial plan be provided to the Governor and the Legislature no later than 18 months from the beginning of the study.

"With health and environmental policy being the epicenter of many discussions across the country and state, we have come together to bring this important legislation to light and fight for passage in the Assembly," said Seawright.

Breast Cancer 3-D Mammography Bill

On Thursday, June 15, 2017, Assembly Member Rebecca A. Seawright announced that A.5677/S.4150, legislation which would expand access to breast cancer screenings without cost sharing, to include breast tomosynthesis screenings or 3-D mammography, passed in the State Senate. In March 2017, Seawright obtained passage of this bill 146-0 in the Assembly and now, it will be delivered to the Governor for consideration.

"It is important to continue to expand access to breast cancer screenings. Breast cancer is one of the most common cancers in New York State. Each year in New York, over 15,000 women are diagnosed with breast cancer. This bill clarifies that insurers would cover 3-D mammograms without co-pays or deductibles. Early detection is key," said Assembly Member Rebecca A. Seawright (D- Upper East Side, Yorkville and Roosevelt Island).

Breast tomosynthesis or 3-D mammography uses x-rays to collect multiple images of the breast from several angles and creates a 3-D image of the breast. Studies have shown It is more effective in detecting cancer in dense breast tissue. Dense breast tissue is one of the strongest predictors of risk for breast cancer.

Equality for Women at Work: Seawright Co-Sponsors Fire Fighters and Police Gender Neutral Bill

On Wednesday, June 14, 2017, Seawright Co-Sponsored a bill introduce by her colleague, Assembly Member Jo Anne Simon, to update antiquated and inaccurate language in state law relating to police officers and firefighters (A8321A). The bill would replace all instances of the words "fireman" or "policeman" with the words "firefighter" or "police officer" in order to update language and promote participation in the professions regardless of gender. The New York City Fire Department (FDNY) and the New York City Police Department (NYPD) joined them in support of this legislation. This bill modernizes the outdated language in the state statute to promote the idea that the professions of law enforcement and firefighting are not exclusive based on gender. Stamping out gender-specific language will ensure that professions that were once seen as nontraditional for women are more likely to appeal to all people, regardless of gender, and will ensure the broad inclusion of women in every aspect of the police and fire departments.

"I am pleased to join the movement against outdated gender references that are institutionalized in many industries, including our police and fire departments. The number of women in male-dominated fields has increased tremendously. According to the U.S. Department of Labor, almost 47% of U.S. workers are women, and more than 39% of women work in occupations where women make up at least three-quarters of the workforce. It is important that this is reflected in the language used in the workplace and I commend Assembly Member Jo Anne Simon and Senator Betty Little for taking this crucial step in the right direction," said Assembly Member Rebecca Seawright.

Fighting for Reproductive Rights: Women Must Be Able to Make Their Own Health Care Decisions

On Monday, June 12, 2017 the Reproductive Health Privacy bill, co-sponsored by Seawright, passed the Assembly. The legislation would prohibit employers from interfering with their workers' health care, including birth control choices (A.566-A). Additionally, employers would be barred from accessing private medical information about their employees without the employee's written consent. While the Assembly has passed this legislation in previous years, it now has even greater importance with an anti-women's health White House and Congress in Washington. The possible repeal of the Affordable Care Act, along with a hostile Supreme Court, threatens many hard-won protections for women and their health care.

"Let me be clear," Assembly Member Seawright said. "Women can never be truly equal until they have complete control over their bodies and their health care decisions without the government or their boss stomping on their constitutional rights."

Shining Light on Special Interest Money in our Elections

Assembly Member Seawright voted for legislation that passed on Monday, June 12, 2017 to close the limited liability corporation (LLC) loophole in the state's campaign finance law to help curb the influence of big money in politics (A.1926).

"Our government should always represent the people, and not be at the beck and call of wealthy special interests," said Seawright. "This measure enhances the integrity of our elections and closes a loophole that allows power-hungry mega donors to make nearly unlimited campaign contributions."

Under current election law, individuals and corporations can make unlimited contributions to the same candidate, political party or campaign committee by creating new LLCs for each contribution. Each LLC is treated as an individual donor, even if multiple LLCs are owned by the same person or entity, which makes it harder to determine the real contributor. This issue was compounded by McCutcheon v. FEC, a 2014 U.S. Supreme Court decision that eliminated aggregate contribution limits on individual donations.

The Assembly measure would extend the $5,000 aggregate contribution limit, already applicable to corporations, to include LLCs, and require LLCs to disclose the names of individuals with membership interests, attributing LLC contributions to them.

The Assembly has continually led the fight to make our elections more transparent and fair so that New Yorkers' concerns aren't drowned out by special interests. Not only has the Assembly repeatedly passed legislation to close the LLC loophole, but a law was passed last year to increase public disclosure requirements for groups that lobby in New York (Ch. 286 of 2016). Further, the Assembly passed a resolution earlier this year requiring legislators to submit information about their outside income to the independent Legislative Ethics Commission (LEC) to determine whether a conflict of interest exists (B.404/C.25).

Addressing the Child Care Crisis

Assembly Member Seawright voted for legislation that passed on Wednesday, June 14, 2017 that would create a child care availability task force to evaluate child care needs and the availability of affordable day care across New York State (A.7726-A).

"There's no denying it – we're facing an affordable child care crisis in this state and we need to do something about it fast," said Seawright. "Families that are already struggling to get by shouldn't be forced to quit their jobs or send their kids to an unsafe place while they work because they simply can't afford quality day care. This task force will provide us with the facts and data we need to develop needed reforms to New York's child care system."

In New York State, the average annual cost of center-based child care for just one child is $14,144, which is nearly twice as much as a year's worth of college tuition at SUNY or CUNY schools. New York has the fourth most expensive child care costs in the nation. An average New York family has to spend over 20 percent of its income to pay for child care for a single infant, and that number skyrockets to 38.7 percent to pay for care for both an infant and a 4-year-old.

The members of the child care availability task force would be appointed by the governor, based on recommendations from the Assembly Speaker and Temporary President of the Senate, and would include at least two parents who have utilized subsidized child care to ensure the people most affected by the affordable care crisis are front and center at the table. The task force would be required to report its findings to the Legislature by the end of the year. Issues under the task force's purview would include access to subsidized child care, the availability of hours outside of the traditional work day and the impact of child care access on employees, economic development and the quality of care.

“Access to affordable child care is essential both for children and their parents,” said Seawright. “Safe, quality care is critical for a child’s early development, and for parents, access to this care allows them to stay in the workforce and ensure their families have food on the table and a roof over their heads. We need to make this legislation law so we can find real solutions to New York’s child care crisis.”

Summer is Here! Tips to Stay Cool and Save Money

- Set your air conditioning to the highest comfortable temperature. Every degree you lower the thermostat drives up your bill by 6 percent;
- When the AC is running, close doors to keep cool air in and hot air out;
- Even when using AC, use ceiling and other fans to provide additional cooling and better circulation;
- Keep shades, blinds and curtains closed. About 40 percent of unwanted heat comes through windows;
- Turn off AC units, lights and other appliances when not at home and use a timer or smart technology to turn on your air conditioner about a half-hour before arriving home;
- Keep AC filters clean;
- To reduce heat and moisture in your home, run appliances such as ovens, washing machines, dryers and dishwashers in the early morning or late at night when it's cooler outside;
- Con Edison offers a variety of energy-efficiency programs for the hot weather season. The Smart AC Program connects customers with smart technology to control their room air conditioners from their computer or mobile device. Learn more by visiting: <https://conedsmartac.com>
