Unemployment Insurance

COVID-19 updates

Federal unemployment benefits

The weekly $600 Federal Pandemic Unemployment Compensation (FPUC) benefit has expired, but there is a new federal program to provide eligible New Yorkers with an additional benefit. Under FEMA's Lost Wages Assistance (LWA) program, both traditional Unemployment Insurance (UI) and Pandemic Unemployment Assistance (PUA) recipients may be eligible for an additional unemployment benefit of up to $300 per week. The benefit will be retroactive to August 1.

The New York State Department of Labor (DOL) is working to implement this program as quickly as possible. It will notify claimants if they must take any action to certify and receive these additional benefits. Until then, please continue to certify weekly so that you continue to receive all the benefits you are entitled to.

To allow your fellow New Yorkers to reach a representative for regular UI or PUA matters, please do NOT call the DOL to inquire about the federal administration's announcement at this time.

State benefits are still available to New Yorkers

Under federal law, those receiving PUA are eligible for up to 46 weeks of benefits.
- New Yorkers who are receiving regular Unemployment Insurance benefits are eligible for up to 59 weeks of benefits. This includes 26 weeks of regular benefits, 13 weeks of Pandemic Emergency Unemployment Compensation (PEUC) and up to 20 weeks of Extended Benefits (EB).
