"Like many New Yorkers, I too am frustrated with the lack of attention given to critical issues that continue to burden many of my constituents in the streets of Brooklyn. Bail reform and public safety are vitally important to all New Yorkers as they should feel secure when venturing outside their homes or riding the subways, however, almost every day we are still reading horror stories of crimes committed against innocent lives, and there hasn't been any progress made. I will continue to fight for what is right and vow to put the safety of millions before anything else."
