February is National Black History Month

Celebrating the barrier breakers, change-makers and champions of equality who've shaped our nation's history

Dear Friends and Neighbors,

February is Black History Month, and in 2022 by honoring the theme of Black Health and Wellness, I am proud to be working to support the health and wellness of New Yorkers, especially black and brown communities who suffer health disparities in the diagnosis and treatment of diseases. This year we are pushing for the passage of an access bill to open National Cancer Institute designated cancer centers to engage patients through Medicaid and the Essential Plan in New York State. Additionally, our bill will reauthorize NYSTEM, New York's publicly funded program to make grants for advance scientific discoveries related to stem cell biology possible.

In Albany we continued budget hearings on Workforce Development and Housing. In the Assembly, I am proud to cosponsor and strongly support budgetary housing initiatives such as Good Cause Eviction to prevent illegal harassment and unfair rent hikes, and the Housing Access Voucher program to help those who are at risk of eviction secure a safe place to live. Tenant's rights and the Homeowner Assistance Fund were the focus of this week's Town Hall Tuesday.

A happy and prosperous Lunar New Year to those ushering in the Year of the Tiger.

"TOWN HALL TUESDAY" Tackles
Housing Evictions, Arrears, Harassment, Heat
Complaints and More

Assembly Member Rebecca Seawright's 51st Town Hall Tuesday via ZOOM tackled the ongoing housing crisis with vital information and tips for tenants as well as co-op, condominium and homeowners facing financial stress due to the pandemic.

Veteran attorney Robert Grimble, a partner in the Manhattan firm of Grimble & LoGuidice and well-known for pro-bono work and expertise in housing law, joined with Noelle Eberts of the non-profit New York Legal Assistance Group, to answer questions on a variety of housing related subjects from Assembly Member Seawright's constituents in the 76th Assembly District encompassing the Upper East Side, Yorkville and Roosevelt Island.

Attorneys Grimble and Eberts offered the following advice:

- Don't panic. Yes, the eviction moratorium expired on January 15, but there is no immediate danger of eviction for rent arrears or any other issue. The city's Housing Courts are dealing with an unprecedented case backlog.
- If you have suffered financial loss or increased expenses due to the pandemic you are eligible for state Housing Assistance Funds (HAF).
- Housing Court judges are generally sympathetic to the needs of apartment dwellers who have suffered financial hardships during the pandemic.
- As long as tenants are aware of their rights and put up some resistance to landlord demands they will be able to delay matters until reasonable compromises can be worked out.
- For tenants in financial distress and who are unable to pay rents, the courts will often approve payment arrangements.
- Organize! One of the best ways for tenants to protect themselves is to form tenants associations. Tenants have a right to meet in the lobby or any other public space to advance their organizing efforts.
- Report harassment or heat and hot water complaints. Call 311 immediately. Do not delay.
- Heating complaints will require proof. Consider placing a thermometer in the middle of the apartment and maintain an hour by hour temperature log.

- Landlords are obliged to keep an apartment in a state of good repair. Under no circumstances can owners bill the resident for the cost of maintenance repairs in an apartment.

- For co-op and condominium owners, making an application for relief from the Homeowners Assistance Fund (HAF) does not require board approval

“The state eviction moratorium ended on January 15 leaving tenants to rely on funding from the Emergency Rental Assistance program that we established in Albany,” Assembly Member Seawright said.

“Throughout the pandemic we have held emergency sessions voting on legislation to keep New Yorkers in their homes by extending eviction moratorium, prioritizing federal funding to cover rental arrears and homeowners and small landlord relief.

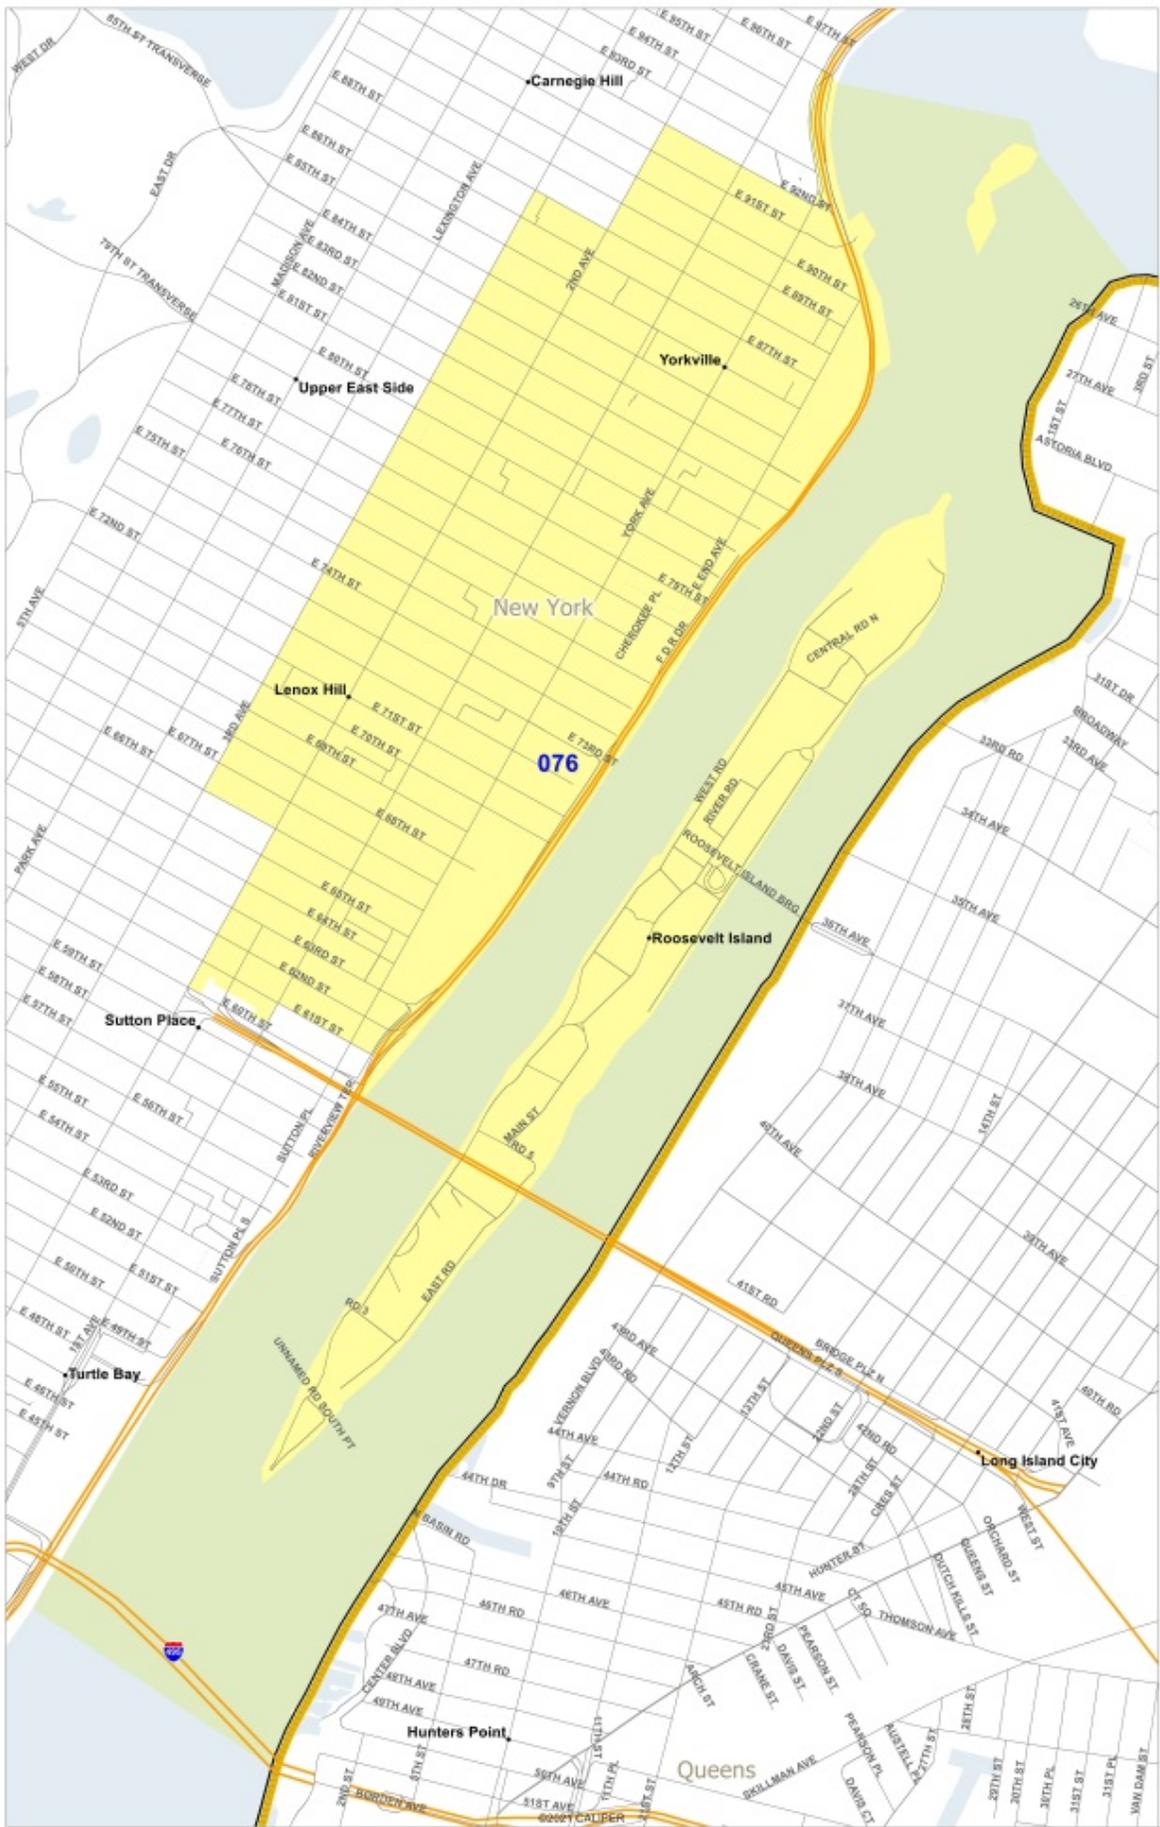

“We clearly can and must do more to protect our financially distressed constituents. With a replenished emergency protection program known as ERAP. I urged Governor Hochul for an extension of the eviction moratorium and for our federal representatives to request additional federal funding to be released for the ERAP program.

“We are encouraging tenants to apply for the Emergency Rental Assistance program which has reopened to prevent evictions until their requests for relief are fulfilled by the federal government. We also encourage co-op and condo owners to apply for HAF if you experienced loss of income as a result of the pandemic.”

New York State Legislative Redistricting Maps Pass Both Houses, Signed By Governor

In 2014, the voters of New York passed a constitutional amendment creating an independent redistricting commission to redraw the boundaries for state legislative and congressional districts following the 2020 census. Disappointingly, the commission was not able to produce agreed upon maps by the deadline.

That meant the legislature was required to complete the job the independent commission could not and approve fair maps that ensure all New Yorkers have equitable representation in their government.

At every step of the way, it was our goal first and foremost to create fair maps that keep communities together, unite communities that were separated previously and ensure the Voting Rights Act is being followed to ensure fair minority representation.
