Take Back Control of Your Home

More than 4 million
New York households use natural gas

Statewide ban of natural gas in newly constructed homes

Tens of thousands of dollars

Whose pocket?

Potentially
yours.¹

Why Energy Choice Matters:

Choosing your energy provider based on your preferences and needs is important. Whether you prioritize cost savings, renewable energy, or reliable service, the power should be in your hands—not by the government.¹

Cost Savings:

A future ban on natural gas in most new buildings will spike utility and construction costs, send New York's energy reliability spiraling down, and make our affordability crisis worse.¹

The Danger of Government Control:

This level of control is an infringement on consumer rights and a step towards a restrictive and controlled state. Energy choice is about more than just selecting a provider—it's about safeguarding your freedom and autonomy.^{1,2}

I Voted against New York's statewide ban on natural gas in new buildings³

“Going all-electric can cost tens of thousands of dollars, an amount far beyond the means of many New Yorkers. You deserve a say in what you pay for and what goes into your home.”

I support a proposal to delay the all-electric school bus purchase mandate⁴

“The current timeline for transitioning to all-electric school buses places a burden on our school districts both financially and logistically. We want to protect our environment, of course, but we simply are not ready to accommodate these goals.”
