Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Interdisciplinary Research Leaders (IRL) Program

The IRL program aims to produce diverse interdisciplinary leaders who conduct and apply high-quality, community-engaged, action-oriented, equity-focused health research in order to drive improvements in the health of communities. Another central goal is to foster and support new interdisciplinary, action-oriented research collaborations that will help build the evidence base for effective community interventions to improve health for all. The two research themes for this year are (1) community development and health; and (2) clinical practice, social services and health.

Fellows in three-person teams will participate in a three-year program during which they will receive leadership training, cutting-edge research method exploration, mentoring, networking opportunities and fellowship and research funds.

Eligibility: Teams must be sponsored by an organization in the U.S. Each team must consist of three individuals, including two researchers and one community partner. Researchers from diverse disciplinary and demographic backgrounds are encouraged to apply. See the full application instructions for further requirements.

Funding: 15 grants of up to $350,000 each
